Q: Test if element is visible I have this website: Now I want to add a black border in the moment that a selectionbox has the value "Target size". I have already added this: var option = document.getElementById("Layer_Control_TargetSize"); var visibility = document.getElementById("Layer_TargetSize_Box"); visibility.style.display="none"; But I think the visibility shouldn't be the problem. I'm not sure about the other one. How do I test if a element is visible with jquery? A: To check if an element is visible on page load, you could use the jQuery method.is(":visible"). Also, if you want to add a border to a span that contains the text "Target size", you would need to change that with.find(). var span = $("#span"); span.css({border: "1px solid red; }); if(span.is(":visible")) { span.addClass("myClass"); } .myClass { border: 2px solid red; }
